The risk of an accident is greater and minor mistakes can have major consequences. Eighteen workers have died in confined spaces in B.C. since 2000 and many others have been injured. There are many hazards that can be encountered including engulfment or immersion, exposure to toxic gases or vapours, oxygen deficiency and flammable atmospheres. Come to this session and learn about the types of confined spaces found in school buildings and the hazards within them. WorkSafeBC is currently reviewing Part 9 of the regulation, which covers confined spaces.	Room 1
